

JESSE MALONEY

EMERGENCY

A 22yr-old graduate of Northern Arizona University is taken to the emergency room after his friends wrapped a bleach soaked towel around the intoxicated young man's head and sealed it with duct tape around the neck with the intent to give him a mild dopamine release from the cleaning product fumes but forgot about him for 2 hours because they were also intoxicated when concocting the idea

His girlfriend involved in the experiment playfully asks a nurse "He's just gonna have a headache, right?"

Whether he's a corpse or vegetable is discussed by doctors working triple shifts

Florence Nightingale worked in dirtier harsher conditions but death was welcomed over miracles that would leave the living lifeless

An ultra sound turns a woman's insides out making her broken heart the property of Blue Shield
And then she goes to heaven on the rain cloud that soaks ambulances screeching into the parking lot

(In the West, the spirit is separate from the body. In the East these are things that are very real and concrete)

Vaccination shots causing autism with drops of mercury leaking their way to a developing brain are administered while measles reemerge in a generation of frightened fathers screaming at medical personnel
RN's always have a headache

The NAU student is pronounced dead and room is made for the next patient