

Permission to Include Student Work in STRATA

STRATA, the STudent Research, Academic, and Talent Archive, is a collection of selected Fort Lewis College student work, including undergraduate research, senior seminar papers, published works, conference presentations, and other creative and artistic projects. Works in STRATA can be accessed through the library catalog at Fort Lewis College and may be indexed and discoverable through the Digital Public Library of America and internet search engines such as Google.

Generally, federal copyright law provides that Fort Lewis College students own the copyright in the works they produce for their classes. Likewise, the Family Educational Records Protection Act (FERPA) provides Fort Lewis College students with protections preventing unauthorized disclosure of educational records, including works produced for their classes. Students' permission is required because STRATA is publicly accessible and discoverable.
